Family Well-Being

- Families are safe, healthy, have opportunities for increased financial security, and have access to physical and mental health services, housing and food assistance & other support services.

Positive Parent-Child Relationships

- Parents and families develop warm relationships that nurture their child's health, development, and learning.

Parents as Lifelong Educators

- Parents observe, guide, promote, & participate in the everyday learning of their child at home, at school and in their communities.

Families as Learners

- Parents learn about their child's personality, development & learning style. They also advance their own learning interests through education, training, & other experiences that support their parenting, career, and life goals.

Families Engagement in Transitions

- Parent support and advocate for child's learning and development as they transition to new learning environments.

Family Connections to Peers and Community

- Parents form connections with peers, mentors and other community members in formal or informal social networks to enhance social well-being and community life.

Families as Advocates and Leaders

- Parents are active in leadership & governance activities or participate in organizing community activities to improve children's safety, health, development, and learning experiences.
